Canadian Violin Music for Student Performers

A Guide to Published Canadian Violin Music Suitable for Student Performers was published in 1993 as part of the series of John Adaskin Project publications, sponsored jointly by CMEA and the Canadian Music Centre. The Guide is designed to assist teachers in selecting and teaching Canadian violin music. Preparation of the Guide began with the identification and location of Canadian violin compositions published prior to 1990. Detailed guidelines for assessing level of difficulty were developed, and these guidelines were used to assess the difficulty of all the located compositions. Those compositions assessed as being of a suitable level of difficulty for junior and intermediate level violinists were analyzed in detail, using standardized frameworks for appraising technical challenges, musical characteristics, and pedagogical value. Included in this Guide are descriptions of selected compositions judged to be pedagogically valuable for junior and intermediate level players (up to the Grade 9 Royal Conservatory of Music of Toronto level).

Information on each composition includes instrumentation, duration, publisher, and level of difficulty. The adjectives, Easy, Medium and Difficult are used as general descriptions of the degree of difficulty, but teacher should refer to the detailed descriptions of the technical challenges in order to judge the suitability of specific compositions for individual students.

Although the analysis of compositions has been as objective as possible, based on carefully devised guidelines and standardized frameworks, the importance of subjective response to music and the uniqueness of each teaching situation must be acknowledged. No piece, whether Canadian or not, is suited to all teaching situations. Since musical tastes and technical abilities differ, it is important that there be a variety of Canadian music, in different styles and at varying levels of technical difficulty, from which teachers can choose.

The selection of repertoire for teaching purposes is one of the educator's most important responsibilities, for music must be at the centre of music education. Teachers owe it to their students to choose the best possible repertoire, weighing all the various factors related to their specific situation, using their musical and educational judgement. They should use whatever information is available to help them make repertoire choices, including the information provided in this Guide. When teachers are aware of the variety of Canadian music which is available and suitable for student performers, and when they have access to support materials to guide them to their choice and teaching of this repertoire, they can include Canadian music as an integral part of a well-balanced music program, thus fostering students' awareness of their national cultural heritage.

A Guide to Published Canadian Violin Music Suitable for Student Performers is available from the Canadian Music Centre, 20 St. Joseph Street, Toronto, Ontario M4Y 1J9. Phone (416) 961-6601. Fax (416) 961-7198.

Reproduced with the permission of CMEA/Acme.